Performance summary

The PIMCO GIS Global Bond Fund returned -0.22% (Institutional Class, Accumulation shares net of fees) and -0.24% (Institutional Class, Income shares net of fees) in January, outperforming the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate (USD Hedged) Index by 0.32% and 0.30% respectively. Over the past 3 months the Fund has returned 1.52% (Institutional Class, Accumulation shares net of fees) and 1.48% (Institutional Class, Income shares net of fees), outperforming the benchmark by 1.18% and 1.14% respectively.

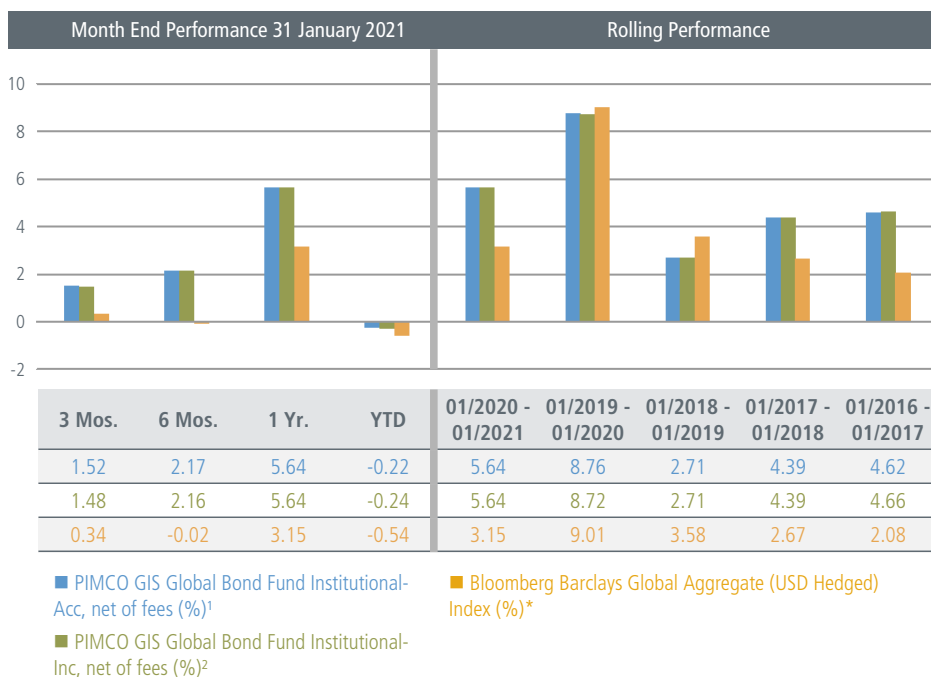

Risk asset performance was mixed in January as concerns over the vaccine rollout and potential for more lockdowns weighed on sentiment. Global equities experienced volatility and closed slightly lower, the dollar strengthened and oil prices rose, while credit spreads were little changed. Meanwhile, developed market rates broadly rose and curves steepened, with US rates rising earlier in the month on fiscal stimulus expectations. The FOMC confirmed that its asset purchase program would remain at its current pace until “substantial further progress” had been made toward its dual objective.

Portfolio positioning

The Fund is modestly underweight to duration overall, but has emphasized sourcing duration from high quality countries such as Denmark, Australia, and Canada, that have the potential to provide diversification benefits in a risk-off scenario. Notably, the Fund is now modestly underweight to duration in the U.S. as rates could face some moderate upward pressure over the cyclical horizon. In the eurozone, the Fund is underweight duration in aggregate with an overweight in the peripherals and an underweight in the core/semi-core regions. The Fund remains underweight to duration in Japan and the U.K.

The Fund continues to take a cautious approach to investment-grade corporate credit given tight valuations and the vulnerable market environment. Instead, the Fund favors senior securitized assets, like Agency and non-Agency mortgages as well as U.K. residential mortgages and Danish covered bonds. The Fund also continues to hold positions in U.S. TIPS and high-quality EM external debt.

In currencies, we are modestly underweight the U.S. dollar against the British pound, euro, Japanese yen and other select developed and emerging market currencies.

Month in review

Risk asset performance was mixed in January as concerns over the vaccine rollout and potential for more lockdowns weighed on sentiment. Global equities experienced volatility and closed slightly lower, the dollar strengthened and oil prices rose, while credit spreads were little changed. Meanwhile, developed market rates broadly rose and curves steepened, with US rates rising earlier in the month on fiscal stimulus expectations. The FOMC confirmed that its asset purchase program would remain at its current pace until “substantial further progress” had been made toward its dual objective.

Sovereign rate strategies contributed to relative performance over the month. Contributions from duration and curve positioning in the U.S. and an underweight to duration in the U.K. more than offset detractions from an overweight to duration in Australia.

Spread sector strategies also contributed to relative performance over the month, primarily due to contributions from positions in Agency and non-Agency MBS and senior and subordinated financials.

Currency strategies modestly detracted from relative performance over the month, primarily due to diversified exposure to select developed and emerging market currencies vs the U.S. dollar.

Outlook and strategy

Global output and demand are likely to rebound strongly in 2021, driven by the rollout of vaccines and continued fiscal and monetary policy support. While valuations seemed to have priced in a return to normality, we remain focused on careful portfolio positioning, capital preservation, and liquidity management.

By positioning cautiously and emphasizing liquidity, we believe we will be better prepared to respond to a variety of shocks. We are modestly underweight duration in the Fund - although global yields are fairly low, we continue to seek relative value opportunities that aim to benefit from an ongoing global grab for duration in the event that the economic outlook worsens. In Europe, accommodative ECB action suggests a more favorable view on peripheral eurozone rates relative to that of core and semi-core. We continue to hold a moderate allocation to TIPS in the portfolio based on attractive valuations and as a hedge against a potential inflation overshoot. We are moderately underweight the U.S. dollar against select developed and emerging market currencies based on valuations.

In spread sectors, we continue to be selective and avoid generic corporate credit risk due to increased risks spurred by recent volatility. We prefer securitized assets, including U.S. non-agency mortgages, U.K. residential mortgages, and Danish mortgages, which offer defensive qualities in addition to reasonable risk premia for liquidity, complexity, and uncertainty over the timing of cash flows. We also continue to hold high quality EM external debt of sovereign and quasi-sovereign issuers in the Middle East.

Share value can go up as well as down and any capital invested in the Fund may be at risk. The Fund may invest in non-U.S. and non-Eurozone securities which involve potentially higher risks including currency fluctuations and political or economic developments. These may be enhanced when investing in emerging markets. Funds that invest in high-yield, lower-rated securities, will generally involve greater volatility and risk to principal than investments in higher-rated securities. The Fund may use derivatives for hedging or as part of its investment strategy which may involve certain costs and risks. Portfolios investing in derivatives could lose more than the principal amount invested. For more details on the fund's potential risks, please read the Key Investor Information Document.

Statements concerning financial market trends or portfolio strategies are based on current market conditions, which will fluctuate. There is no guarantee that these investment strategies will work under all market conditions or are suitable for all investors and each investor should evaluate their ability to invest for the long term, especially during periods of downturn in the market. Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate (USD Hedged) Index provides a broad-based measure of the global investment-grade fixed income markets. The three major components of this index are the U.S. Aggregate, the Pan-European Aggregate, and the Asian-Pacific Aggregate Indices. The index also includes Eurodollar and Euro-Yen corporate bonds, Canadian Government securities, and USD investment grade 144A securities. It is not possible to invest directly in an unmanaged index.

Morningstar ratings are only shown for those funds that have achieved a 4 or 5 star rating. Ratings for other share classes are either lower or not available.

Investments made by a Fund and the results achieved by a Fund are not expected to be the same as those made by any other PIMCO-advised Fund, including those with a similar name, investment objective or policies. A new or smaller Fund's performance may not represent how the Fund is expected to or may perform in the long-term. New Funds have limited operating histories for investors to evaluate and new and smaller Funds may not attract sufficient assets to achieve investment and trading efficiencies. A Fund may be forced to sell a comparatively large portion of its portfolio to meet significant shareholder redemptions for cash, or hold a comparatively large portion of its portfolio in cash due to significant share purchases for cash, in each case when the Fund otherwise would not seek to do so, which may adversely affect performance.

A word about risk: Investing in the bond market is subject to risks, including market, interest rate, issuer, credit, inflation risk, and liquidity risk. The value of most bonds and bond strategies are impacted by changes in interest rates. Bonds and bond strategies with longer durations tend to be more sensitive and volatile than those with shorter durations; bond prices generally fall as interest rates rise, and the current low interest rate environment increases this risk. Current reductions in bond counterparty capacity may contribute to decreased market liquidity and increased price volatility. Bond investments may be worth more or less than the original cost when redeemed. Investing in foreign denominated and/or domiciled securities may involve heightened risk due to currency fluctuations, and economic and political risks, which may be enhanced in emerging markets. Currency rates may fluctuate significantly over short periods of time and may reduce the returns of a portfolio. Derivatives may involve certain costs and risks such as liquidity, interest rate, market, credit, management and the risk that a position could not be closed when most advantageous. Investing in derivatives could lose more than the amount invested. Diversification does not ensure against loss.
